

Wild Roots – Parent Insights

My child has gained so many things from participating in Wild Roots! I feel that he now has a better connection to the natural world. I am noticing that he is more interested in being outside and exploring on his own! He has increased his independence and comfort level with taking more risks. I have noticed that when we go into the forest now, he actually looks up and all around and makes comments on what he sees, what he wants to know and what might be dangerous (fallen branches, etc.). He shares his learning with others and is excited to attend and see his friends! He sees his “Forest Friends” as something of a family to him. He is also asking to be carried less and wants to walk on his own and explore. He has brought his excitement for nature to our daughter as well. He will now sit down in the yard by himself and explore something and ask questions about what he sees
